Books similar to Atlas of the European Novel: 1800-1900

The idea of creating a "literary atlas" grips Professor Moretti, and this book is a small attempt at doing so. Divided into two sections it looks at the geography of literature from within (geography in the texts themselves) and without (the geography of the actual books, i.e. their spread and dissemination), restricting itself basically to the European novel of the nineteenth century.

Atlas of the European Novel 1800-1900 - Franco Moretti

Moretti's Atlas of the European Novel is the kind of book that makes me happy to be a literature student. His style is almost literary in its vividness (although I would say the sentences without verbs are too numerous) and mobility.

Moretti has offered a new – cartographic – perspective on literature in his Atlas of the European Novel (1997). On the one hand, he demonstrated geographic patterns that can be traced within literature: the geography of Jane Austen's characters, places of origin of villains in British literature, the locations of Balzac's novels, etc.
