kindled philosophical
debate on the existence of God in Anglo-American
philosophical circles by arguing that belief in God was like belief in other minds : although neither could be demonstrated conclusively against a determined sceptic
both were fundamentally rational.

Because there is no conclusive argument for the existence of other minds all the while we are seemingly justified in believing in other minds, we can draw an analogy between the existence of God and the existence of other minds, and so answer the question with the affirmative. Belief in the existence of God is rational.

Charting a "middle way" between the extremes represented by Alvin Plantinga and Richard Swinburne, Garth Hallett explores the thesis that if belief in other minds is rational and true (as it surely is), so too is belief in God.
